

SOLVING THE PROBLEM OF FOOD WASTE

Food waste is one of the most serious problems facing humanity today. 40% of all food produced globally is thrown away, which equates to an annual value exceeding $2.7 trillion. Meanwhile, 800 million people are starving or malnourished, including 10% of Singaporean households who are living in 'food poverty.' And the environmental impact of food waste is catastrophic. It takes a landmass larger than China just to grow the food that we never eat, and discarded food accounts for 25% of our planet's total freshwater consumption. Overall, according to a recent report by Project Drawdown, food waste is the single most important issue to tackle if we are to avoid the worst effects of the climate crisis.

OLIO's mission is to solve the problem of food waste in the home & local community. We connect neighbours with each other, and volunteers with local businesses, so that surplus food (and other good things) can be shared, not thrown away. Over the past 5.5 years OLIO has grown from a local initiative in North London to an international movement. We have 5 million users across 56 countries (and counting!) who have collectively shared more than 40 million portions of food.

Underpinning this incredible growth has been our Food Waste Heroes programme, which matches OLIO's trained volunteers with nearby businesses to redistribute surplus food via the OLIO app. OLIO volunteers, who number over 40,000, collect and share food from 5,000+ business locations every week.
